Meeting on Draft Housing Element

January 2012– Date TBD (check the City's website)

You are receiving this notice because you own or occupy property which is near the vacant property along Butte Street identified in the map below. This site is currently under consideration as a future affordable housing site.

The City of Sausalito is preparing an update of its Housing Element in accordance with State law. The State requires that the City address a Regional Housing Needs Allocation (RHNA), which establishes the number of new housing units needed by various income groups (from very low to upper income) in each California jurisdiction. The RHNA for the City of Sausalito was established at 372 units for the two planning periods of 1999-2006 and 2007-2014. The Housing Element describes various programs the City will continue or establish to address its regional housing need. Cities are not required to actually build the housing—rather, they must demonstrate to the State that the opportunity to build the housing has been created.

In order to address the RHNA, the City is required to identify specific sites that potentially could be available for housing. The City is considering residentially zoned properties, either vacant or able to accommodate additional units. The City is also reviewing sites, both residential and non-residential, that might be suitable to accommodate residential development at an increased density.

The vacant property along Butte Street has been identified as a site with potential for rezoning to allow residential development at an increased density. The site was chosen due to its size, current use, and potential for future residential development. Although identified as a potential housing site, it is important to emphasize that no property owner would be obligated to develop his or her property for such purpose as part of any adopted Housing Element.

This site will be a topic of discussion at a series of meetings and the City welcomes your input. Please see the sidebar for more information regarding upcoming meetings or contact Lilly Schinsing, Associate Planner, at (415) 289-4134 or LSchinsing@ci.sausalito.ca.us.
